NEW YORK COTTON MARKET.

New York, Jan. 9—Following the advance of last week, cotton futures further improved to-day 9 to 12 points, with speculation more active and general than in many weeks. For a time around the opening the bear faction stubbornly resisted efforts to work prices higher, but they only succeeded prices higher, but they only succeeded, and on this demand, totally increased, and succeeded around the opening their points and increased in the beautiful of the prices also put in an appearance from foreign and Southern sources and added not a little to the better feeling all around. While the short element had only a good weather map to support their views, the bull crowd were backed up by strong English cables, a dwindling crop movement, stiffening spot markets, complaints of bad roads throughout the South and reports that planters in the South had inausurated a movement, the purpose of which was to bring about a uniform reduction in acreage this year.
